

As part of the "Face" project belonging to "Erasmus +", I was given the opportunity to participate in the 3rd mobility of the "Face" project from 25 to 31 October, to Cyprus, accompanied by two school teachers. During the week of the trip, I stayed at the Kourloulis family home, having as partners two brothers, Panos and Georgia. Despite that I didn't stay in the house of the cypriot guy who I hosted in Portugal, I was not too grateful for all the hospitality and comfort that the family provided me. I was also very grateful for all the attention paid to me in allowing me to choose according to what I most wanted to do or where I would like to go, as well as to give me the opportunity to taste the most famous dishes of traditional greek and cypriot food. Throughout the week we had the opportunity to participate in various workshops, games and conversations about the EU and the Schengen agreement, we visited cypriot cities such as Limassol and Nicosia and some smaller towns. It was fantastic to be able to absorb the architectural characteristics of the different cities and places on the island. What fascinated me the most was the contact and the experiences with many interesting people from so different countries. People with different habits and cultures all together due the unity and collective learning. It was absolutely magical to experience. I will forever remember this experience as the first trip that I got involved in the culture of a country. I met the natives, discovered and tasted the traditional gastronomy, contemplated both the architectural style of the cities and the natural beauty of the island's landscapes. I the back to Portugal we stopped in Athens, and because the time between the flights was too long we had another amazing opportunity. So, we were, during an unbelievable day, in Athens. We saw the famous acropolis! At that time it was impossible to express my level of gratitude through words. This trip was simply perfect in all aspects without any doubt, and all due the collective work of all involved in this unique project which is "Erasmus +".
